As competence is looked upon with but little less favor than a prodigal in the net. Therefore how does it become the President to stand idly by with pen in hand and allow a bill that he pronounced both obnoxious and pernicious to become a law by such act. Has he not secretly indicated a measure he once condemned?

It must be a pleasure to the G. O. P. to know they have in this district this year a candidate in the person of the Hon. E. G. Serre, who will contend with the Hon. J. H. Fox. It is to be hoped he will be aided by him all over the district and it will be an educational campaign in every particular.

A TALK WITH A TEAMSTER.

Wages Lower in West Virginia and Plenty Looking for a Job.

When I last wrote I had been talking to an unfortunate farmer who had lost $4,200 because he could not find any market for his pork. I have since been in Parkersburg, where business is very dull. While idling around the town, I saw a teamster sitting on his wagon at a street corner, so I sauntered up and asked him: "How is business?"

"Business," he answered, as he looked me over, "there's no business here." "How's that?" I asked.

"Hanged if I know," was the reply. "We ain't got any hauling to speak of nowadays."

"Don't you make as much money as you used to?" was my next question.

"No sir, I do not, and nobody else does around here," said the teamster.

"But it costs you less to live," I said. "We were told to expect everything would be cheap."

"Yes," he answered. "They have cheapened wages. A couple of years ago I never earned less than twelve dollars a week, but less than a year ago I was lucky sometimes if I took home ten dollars."

"What are you earning now?" I asked.

"I get now only seven dollars and a half. That's all my boss says he can pay me, and I believe him, because I know he is not doing half the business that he did two years ago. If I give up my job there is nothing else for me to do and there are plenty of idle men around here who would be glad to get the job for less money than I get."

"That's pretty hard," I said. "But don't the things you buy cost less?"

"Well, there are a few things I can save a cent or two on now and again, perhaps ten or twenty-five cents a week, but what is that when I am earning nearly five dollars a week less?"

"How do you account for the change?"

"Because we were all—fools. We were doing well and didn't know it. The Democratic politicians told us such infernal lies down here, that wages would be high and everything else cheap, that we believed them. They said that Free Trade would bring cheap goods into the country, and we would save lots of money. They fooled us pretty well, but it isn't one fool after another. We never saw a Democratic government before and by thunder we don't want to again, and we won't if the working people of West Virginia can help it. You watch the elections and see. Mark my words now, what I'm telling you is straight goods. That Wilson—to think of a man acting like he has after all that the Democrats told us two years ago, why it makes me want to hitch myself to that lamp post and let my team here kick me."

GATHERING IN THE FRUITS.

Grover Cleveland, in a speech delivered in New York on January 30, 1890, declared "ours is not a destructive party." In another speech, on September 26, 1892, he declared the volume of business style that "Tariff reform is to be accomplished 'without disaster or demoralization.'" Let us see how these statements tally with the facts. It is to be noted that Cleveland made them, and already the country has learned by bitter experience that the political or economic principles it espoused were not carried out.

"Without disaster or demoralization." Let the record speak for itself. The bank clearing for 1893, which indicates the volume of business, fell off the extent of ten billion dollars, as compared with the year 1892. Seventy-five railroad systems, representing one-sixth of the railroad mileage of the country, went into the hands of receivers in the first year of the Cleveland administration. The gross receipts of 121 railroad systems declined more than eight million dollars, or 14.5 per cent. Five hundred and ninety-eight banks were compelled to close their doors. The number of business failures in 1893 was 19,650, an increase of 30 per cent. in one year. For six years preceding Cleveland's inauguration, the aggregate liabilities in all failures did not sum much more than $13,500,000. In 1893 they amounted to $135,000,000.

We do not know what meaning Grover Cleveland attaches to the statement that he is not a "disaster and demoralization." In the figures we have given an ordinary person will see evidence in abundance of what Cleveland's policy has accomplished. The figures which still further emphasize the fact that the first year of the present administration was one of "disaster and demoralization." During that year the millions of textile goods fell off from $70,337,882 to $48,893,875, a decrease of 37 per cent. The following is the percentage of decrease in sales in other industries: Iron, 26 per cent; furniture, 26 per cent; shoes, 18 per cent; hats, 19.5 per cent; hardware, 19 per cent; decrease of, means means the loss of employment to thousands.

Twelve months after the Presidential candidate of the Free Trade party had declared that "the reform" was not an injury to the business of the country, one-half the woolen mills in the United States were closed, and those that were running on that operation were running on half-time.

Such are some of the fruits of the first two months of Clevelandism. What other disasters are in store for the country no one can tell. Never was the outlook gloomier than at the present moment. As we write, the greatest strike of our day and generation is in progress. The immediate cause of it is the greed of a millionaire who has made hard times an excuse for cutting down wages, which it will be noted in passing, did not advance during the flush times when the millionaires were piloting the country. Indirectly, however, the policy espoused by Cleveland and his party must be held responsible for the present state of affairs.

"Yes," he answered. "They have cheapened wages. A couple of years ago I never earned less than twelve dollars a week, but less than a year ago I was lucky sometimes if I took home ten dollars."

"What are you earning now?" I asked.

NATIONAL CAPITAL.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]
WASHINGTON, August 27, 1894.

The current is down. So far as tariff legislation is concerned, the House has been dead for a long time. This edict went forth when the Senate adopted, by a vote of twenty-seven to sixteen, the resolution that "in the opinion of the Senate the enactment of further legislation on contested matters is impracticable, and that Congress should adjourn at the earliest possible date." The resolution received the unanimous endorsement of the Republicans and Populists, as well as of the Democratic "conservative" Senators. Blanche, Caffery, Gibson, Gorman, Murphy, Pugh and Smith. This was the death knell of the "pop-gun" tariff bills and they have virtually joined the Wilson bill with the general majority. There is already a general exodus out of the city, both of Representatives and Senators. There is nothing to be done now except to wait for the President upon the Gorman tariff bill. The reasons that have been frequently stated, that the President will probably require the full ten days given him by law before he returns the bill to the Senate.

There was another parting vote in the Senate which, although it occurred in the hands of receivers in the first year of the Cleveland administration. The gross receipts of 121 railroad systems declined more than eight million dollars, or 14.5 per cent. Five hundred and ninety-eight banks were compelled to close their doors. Down in the Mines.

Coal trade is now expected to improve as the time of year when coal dealers usually commence to prepare for winter is at hand.

Foreman Dan Evans and his crew of coal workers are fast getting a fine stock of new dresses, and will be ready to appear in the streets in the winter.

Foreman Tibb Robinson, of the Empire mines made a business and pleasant trip to the west, and will be ready to take his place when an opportunity presents itself.

Stranger indeed it is that some men will take a trip to the west, and will be ready to take their place when an opportunity presents itself.

Why, Paul simply knocked that friend out one day when he accused him that: "Look here, I can't see that you have any sense of the situation in this country."

The friend said at once that Paul was a papa and glad of it, so congratulations were in order.

Samuel Pitt was down to see as usual, and if we mistake not, he was feeling very good over the bright prospects of doing a good coal business in the near future. He was in a fine mood, and his mind was full of the production of the new mine lately purchased by him.

The Crabtree Coal Company is now busy making improvements which will facilitate the loading of coal. A new track is being laid from a new opening to the mine.

Down in the Mines.

Coal trade is now expected to improve as the time of year when coal dealers usually commence to prepare for winter is at hand.

Foreman Dan Evans and his crew of coal workers are fast getting a fine stock of new dresses, and will be ready to appear in the streets in the winter.

Foreman Tibb Robinson, of the Empire mines made a business and pleasant trip to the west, and will be ready to take his place when an opportunity presents itself.

Stranger indeed it is that some men will take a trip to the west, and will be ready to take their place when an opportunity presents itself.

Why, Paul simply knocked that friend out one day when he accused him that: "Look here, I can't see that you have any sense of the situation in this country."

The friend said at once that Paul was a papa and glad of it, so congratulations were in order.
